Liposuction Sheffield

Liposuction Sheffield is a surgical procedure of removing adipose tissue from fatty pockets that accumulate in specific areas of the body. In simpler words, liposuction Sheffield is a technique that is used to rid people of extra fat deposits to enhance or improve the general shape and contour of the body; it is commonly done for cosmetic reasons.

How Is It Done?

Typically the process progresses in 3 distinct phases as described below.

- Consultations – this is the most initial phase of the process and during this time you will not only familiarize yourself with the surgeon and details of the surgery you have chosen to have, you will also make a number of highly significant decisions. These include the type of anesthesia that you would like to have administered, what results you would like to see, what techniques you would like to have performed and how much the process will cost you. It is important to ask all questions on your mind regarding the surgery during this phase.

- Surgery – this is the second phase of the process and begins with pre-op preparation such as clipping of an oximeter to the finger and application of an anti-bacterial solution over the area to be treated. This is followed by the surgeon making incision marks the anesthesiologist administering local or general anesthesia. A stainless steel cannula connected to a powerful suction pump is inserted in to the fatty layers between the skin and muscle through minute incisions. Using the power of the suction pump small tunnels are created in the fat layers and it is the collapse of these layers that results in improvement of the contour and shape of the area being treated. The surgery ends with stitching and bandaging of the incisions.
- Post-op care -- the duration of this final phase of the process is dependent on the extent of your surgery. You will be required to stay under observation at the health care facility for a certain period of time and once you can take care of the wounds on your own, you will be discharged.
